TIME TO INDULGE...

Full Body Massage

At Juicy Oasis we are into simplifying everything, including our massage menu. Unlike many spas, you won't see a list of a thousand different massages, which we feel do no more than create confusion. Instead we have just a handful that cover what 99 per cent of people really want. It is safe to say, you either want to be stroked and have oil slowly rubbed into your body and taken to a blissful place, or you want your muscles worked on and your pain relieving.

Most people either go for our signature 'Pure Bliss' Full Body Massage or our signature 'Deep Tissue' Full Body Massage. If you have a serious issue that needs attention, then we have a Clinical Massage with our highly qualified therapists who offer Myofascial and Osteopathy treatments. If you want to experience something out of the ordinary, then indulge in our 'Tantric Bliss' Massage. If you are in the mood for something truly special, then try our unique 'Rainforest Experience', which combines exfoliation, cascades of warm water over your body and a beautiful warm oil massage.

Colonic

At Juicy Oasis we fully understand that colonic hydrotherapy may not be everyone's cup of tea! However, as with many things in life, you shouldn't knock it until you've tried it. Around 6,000 people in the UK undergo a colonic irrigation every month and celebrities such as Jennifer Aniston, Madonna and Courtney Love are said to be fans of the treatment. Princess Diana was even reported to be a huge advocate of colonics, having weekly treatments which she claimed took 'all the aggro out of me'. This is perhaps the best way to describe the feeling most experience after a treatment, one of a huge weight being lifted from both mind and body.

A colonic is like having an internal bath designed to clean the whole colon. This involves the gentle infusion of warm, filtered water into the rectum. The water stimulates the colon muscle to help stimulate the peristaltic action. Colonics cleanse the colon of mucus, accumulated fecal matter, gas and toxins that are transported there during the detox process.

During your time at Juicy Oasis, you will be living on nothing but pure juices and fresh 'green blends'. These provide the body with vital nutrition needed to assist the body with releasing toxicity from the cells and tissues. Many of these toxins are transported in the form of fat-soluble toxins and these can only be released through the colon via bile released from the liver. It is very important to release these toxins at this stage to avoid reabsorbing them back into the system. Therefore the perfect time to have a colonic is during a detox plan.

The Eden Spa colonic

50 minutes €85

Our colonic hydrotherapist will explain the procedure and make you feel extremely relaxed before, during and after the process. Some people only require one treatment during the week. However, depending on your diet and for optimum results, we recommend a minimum of two (one at the beginning and one towards the end of a detox). Those looking for optimum results choose to have a course of treatments.

ORGANIC COFFEE INFUSION €10

While at Juicy Oasis, this is the only place you'll find a coffee bean! Coffee infusions are powerful detoxifiers, stimulating bile release to move toxins through the bowel for elimination. These compounds also stimulate the liver to produce powerful enzymes which bind toxins and flush them through the system during the treatment. We recommend coffee infusions at the beginning and mid-week.

WHEATGRASS INFUSION €10

'Raise the game' of your colonic treatment with a wheatgrass juice infusion. When you infuse wheatgrass juice via the colon, its high nutritional load is quickly transported to the bloodstream, helping to cleanse and heal. We recommend a wheatgrass infusion towards the end of the week to provide your system with additional nutrition after the majority of the toxicity has been processed.

Cryotherapy

Athletes have long extolled the virtues of applying cold to muscle strains and sitting in ice baths to reduce inflammation. Andy Murray was famously photographed waist deep in ice, proudly clutching his Wimbledon trophy. The Welsh Rugby Union team went to the Olympic Sports Centre in Poland for daily treatments before the World Cup and Cristiano Ronaldo reportedly has a cryo-chamber installed in his home.

Cryotherapy has a growing reputation among A-listers for its beauty benefits, from reducing wrinkles and skin-firming, to boosting energy levels, treating cellulite, acne and its much talked about association for weight loss. High-profile supporters include Mark Wahlberg, Demi Moore, Daniel Craig, Tony Robbins (reported to have a chamber in each of his homes), Alicia Keys and Hugh Jackman, who claim benefits from managing pain, treating injuries, helping to keep in shape, to fighting the signs of ageing.

What does it help with?

Cryotherapy has been used for over 30 years for a wide variety of inflammatory conditions. It originated in Japan in the 1970s for the treatment of rheumatoid arthritis and several studies have found it can significantly reduce pain in people with inflammatory diseases as well as arthritis. It is widely used to increase recovery times from injuries, boost immunity, improve circulation and for general wellbeing.

How does it work?

Dr Colin Crosby, a consultant at the BMI Garden Hospital, North London explains: "When you go outdoors on a snowy day, your hands and feet and other extremities go numb. This is because the blood is being pumped to your main organs and brain to protect them. Then when you go back inside, the blood is flushed back into the system. That's why your hands tingle. If you have, say, a five-fold increase in that cold and you stay in the chamber, the blood will do the same and flow to your brain and main organs. When you come out, the reaction means a huge blood flow to other areas including those which are damaged. The endocrine system is stimulated by the intense cold and releases a host of chemicals including anti-inflammatory markers and pain-relieving hormones. The body also releases feel-good endorphins and adrenaline to help the body in repairing injury"

Cryotherapy & fat burning

Cryotherapy rapidly increases the body's metabolic rate. Directly after a treatment, the blood floods back throughout your body, boosting immunity, generating cell renewal, providing natural pain relief and a general feel good factor as endorphins rush through your system. Your body uses energy to heat back up to temperature and it is said that for up to 6-8 hours afterwards, you'll burn 400-700 calories.

Cryotherapy to aid weight loss has long-standing scientific research. One of the most famous the 'Antarctic study' looked at the calorific requirements of those who worked in the South Pole. It found they needed an average of 1,500 additional calories a day to maintain body weight. Experts believe that sessions offer people a way to use cold temperatures to lose weight, as the body must burn stored energy, to restore its normal temperature.

What happens during a cryotherapy session?

Cryotherapy exposes the body to temperatures of around minus 120-160°C for three minutes. During this time, the average skin temperature drops to about 10°C, however the core temperature remains unchanged. Before you enter the chamber, you will be given boots and gloves to wear. You need to expose as much skin as possible, so you should wear underwear/swimwear. The chamber is pre-cooled and your head and neck remain above the chamber. A mist of nitrogen is then sprayed into the chamber in order to lower the temperature. Our trained therapist will never leave the room and you can request to leave the chamber at any time during the treatment. Please note: It is incredibly important you do not enter the chamber with any moisture on the body i.e. sweaty socks or damp swimwear.
